

BANK RECONCILIATION AND JOURNAL ENTRY SUPPORT

Isaiah Charles

WebBank | Accounting Internship and Accounting Analyst Experience

OVERVIEW

As part of my accounting work at WebBank, I perform daily bank reconciliations. I compare our bank balances and internal spreadsheets with each bank's transaction reports and balance statements. When I identify a difference, I investigate the cause and prepare and enter journal entries as needed, with supporting documentation.

DAILY PROCESS

Comparing balances and transactions

I review the balances in our records against the bank's statements and transaction reports. I also compare the activity in our spreadsheets with the transactions reported by the bank to identify items that do not match.

Investigating differences

I investigate missing entries, outstanding checks, bank fees, and timing differences. The goal is to understand why the records differ and determine whether an entry is needed or an item has simply not cleared yet.

Preparing and entering journal entries

When an adjustment is needed, I prepare and enter the journal entry. I provide backup documentation that supports the amount and explains the reason for the entry.

MY CONTRIBUTION

My work helps keep our accounting records aligned with bank activity and provides documentation for the entries I record. Completing this process daily allows differences to be identified and investigated promptly.

This responsibility requires attention to detail and judgment. A difference between two balances does not automatically mean an error occurred. I need to review the underlying transactions before deciding what action to take.

SKILLS APPLIED

- Bank reconciliation
- Transaction research and discrepancy investigation
- Journal entry preparation and posting
- Spreadsheet review
- Supporting documentation
- Daily accounting operations

This summary describes my responsibilities without including internal financial data, bank account information, or partner names.